AN INDEX OF AN 1881 HISTORY OF THE ARKANSAS VALLEY

This index of an 1881 history of the Arkansas Valley of Colorado contains listings of the names of people, companies, organizations, mines, etc.; but no place names. This 889 page volume had over 6400 mentions on separate pages of the above entities, not including place names. The high average of 7 names per page can possibly be attributed to being a "vanity" publication, an early day version of WHO'S WHO IN COLORADO. After typing the more than 6000 names into a computer data base and printing them out, a reasonable effort was made to whether a Mr. Wilson was the same person as J. Wilson, or Lieut. Wilson, or Col. Wilson, or John Wilson, or J.C. Wilson. Whenever doubt existed, then they stayed as separate records. After condensation, there still remained 4221 records, in 82 pages.

When a person is mentioned on several consecutive pages, such as pages 578, 579, 580, and 581, then the entry was shown as "578-81". When numerous mention of a name entails too many page numbers for the column width, then it is presented as more than one record of the same name. For instance, "Denver & Rio Grande Railroad" had 51 references and "Nathan C. Meeker" had 26 references.

This volume was written by different authors, and is replete with objective histories, self-aggrandizing personal histories, humorous anecdotes, tall tales, prejudice against Indians and southerners, and two viewpoints of the Sand Creek skirmish as a battle, or a massacre, with Chivington as the hero, or villain. It is a rich source of historical material about the counties along the Arkansas River, but contains information about Denver and Boulder, by no means near the Arkansas. Some of the biographies in this book could provide a valuable source of inspiration for historical fiction. It is my hope that this index will be of help to the genealogist, historian, or just-plain history buff.
